

The NCL Bulletin is an international, academic journal, with its two issues being published in June and December of 1947. As this periodical is to propagate library studies and information science, the NCL welcomes scholars to submit articles. Such papers should cover the theory and application of library and information science.

Our periodical may be released on various forms of media. After publication, the honorarium will be set as stipulated by the R.O.C. central government. In addition, three copies of the issue that contains the author's article will be sent to the author gratis. The author of a submitted article enjoys copyright privileges, but the National Central Library retains property rights for the article. Therefore, the author has the right to republish it in a collection of his/her essays. However, anyone else, no matter the purpose, must obtain our permission to reprint (including abridged versions) or translate the article.
